RESIDENT PROFILE

Eleanor Adams was born in Gorham, Maine and grew up on her parents' 400-acre dairy farm. Eleanor went to Gorham Teachers' College and taught full time for 14 years. She met Byron Adams in the post office and they were married in 1937. Eleanor taught all grade levels and is still hearing from her 1936 first graders! She taught part-time while raising their two children in Ogunquit, and later became the principal of the Ogunquit Village School. After retiring in 1970, Eleanor and Byron traveled in their mobile home for two years. Then they lived in Sarasota in the winter and Ogunquit in the summer. Eleanor's daughter, June, is a lawyer and her son, Stanley, was an engineer for Boeing, having graduated from Cornell and MIT. She is "Beach Gram" to four grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. Eleanor is glad to be back in New England near her daughter. She says, "I am content here among new friends and I'm enjoying the services Nashoba Park has to offer."
