Rose Meagher McMurtry was born in Jamaica Plain. Her father worked for Boston Elevator Trains and her mother stayed home to raise the family. Rose attended Girls High School in Boston and attended Boston University for a time after graduating from high school. Rose then went on to work at the Treasurer's Office at the State House.

Rose says that what she enjoys about living at Neville Place are the people, the meals, and the activity.

Rose met her husband, George Carlton McMurtry, at Proparvulis, a Catholic Charity Organization. Rose and Carl were both singers and were involved in singing in their spare time. After they married, they lived for a long time in Cambridge on Pearl Street in the Cambridgeport area. They had three sons: George, Robert, and Douglas. They later moved to Lincoln, Massachusetts.

Rose continued to sing long after she retired, both on the Cape and in the Boston area. She has several grandchildren and a great-grandchild. Her grandson Conner has performed his

Nutcracker Ballet

We attended a performance of the Nutcracker Ballet in December at the Spingold Theater at Brandeis University.

Sheldon Hughes, Ed Hurley, Jeanne DePasqualie, and Helen Thornton get ready for the show.

Dorothy Lawrence and Rose Seron enjoy the performance.

Rosemary Kennedy, Kathleen Langley, Ed Hurley, Jeanne DePasqualie, Helen Thornton and Sheldon Hughes.

Trimming the Neville Place Tree!

Top to bottom: Agnes Dillon and Helen Thornton prepare ornaments for the tree; Vera Metastasio, Rose McMurtry and Phyllis Furst in front of completed tree; Ray and Betty Doyle place the decorations.
